EDITOR'S CORNER

Have you washed away yet? It's been a near miss at our house! Hopefully you've been able to stay dry.

We will be meeting in June. This time we will be setting up tables! It won't be the format you are used to seeing. Social distancing is still in play. And we will be furnishing bottled water and prepackaged snack foods. If you want a different drink or ice, you will need to bring it.

Our graduating seniors will be sharing their scholarship essays at the next meeting. So be sure to attend.

In July, we're planning to have the double auction. We're tentatively planning our yearly trip to St. Charles. Please let Jim G. know if you want to attend. The bus to the Missouri Numismatic Show will run on July 23rd.

Hope to see everyone at the next meeting. Until then stay dry and cool!

Dyan

Coin of the Month

2019 $1: American Indians In the Space Program

The 2019 Native American $1 coin features the contributions of Native Americans to the United States space program. These accomplishments include the work of Mary Golda Ross of the Cherokee Nation.

Mary Golda Ross was one of 40 engineers who worked for Lockheed's Advanced Development Programs, the company's top secret think tank. She was the only American Indian and only woman on the team aside from the secretary. Much of her work is still classified today. Her work helped develop the Agena spacecraft for the Gemini and Apollo space programs.

In addition to honoring the contributions of Mary Golda Ross, the coin also features an astronaut representing Commander John Herrington of the Chickasaw Nation. In 2002, he became the first Native American to walk in space. He was part of the 16th Space Shuttle mission to visit the International Space Station. On his journey, he carried the Chickasaw Nation flag to honor his Native American heritage.

On the reverse, the design features Mary Golda Ross (Cherokee Nation), the first Native American engineer in the U.S. space program, writing calculations. In the background, an Atlas-Agena rocket launches into space, with an equation inscribed in its cloud. The equation shows the energy it takes to leave Earth and reach the orbit of a distant planet. An astronaut conducts a spacewalk above. The astronaut represents Native American astronauts, including John Herrington. A group of stars in the field behind indicates outer space.

On the obverse, it features an image of Sacagawea, the Shoshone who helped Lewis and Clark on their historic voyage of exploration.
